Naval Reform to be Inaugurated by Secretary

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Heeding the cry for naval reform, Secretary Meyer inaugurates Wednesday one of the most sweeping navy department changes since the establishment of the bureau in 1842. Himself a manufacturer, Secretary Meyer hopes to put the department on a basis beyond the dreams of his predecessors. The keynote is subordination of bureau chiefs. A summary of the changes includes: Four advisers, aide for fleet operations, and an aide for inspections. The last named does away with inspections by biased chiefs of departments. The bureau are to be grouped into two divisions, material and personnel. A modern system of bookkeeping, the separation

MAN OF TWO WIVES HAS COME TO GRIEF

By Associated Press
ST. LOUIS, Nov. 29.—Samuel H. Buschmann is in jail on a warrant issued in Milwaukee at the instance of Mrs. Bertha Liers Buschmann of Milwaukee, charging bigamy. He was taken from his home last night, where he was living with Mrs. Annie Juergens Buschmann, whom he married in 1892. Buschmann does not deny the charge. Last June his St. Louis wife confronted him in Milwaukee, where he has been living with his other wife. As neither wife would prosecute, they agreed to abide by his choice. Buschmann chose his St. Louis wife and came here to live. The Milwaukee wife stipulated that she should be paid $16 a month, and it is said these payments were made. Buschmann told Detective Louis Krause of Milwaukee that his St. Louis wife's boasts to his Milwaukee wife caused his arrest.

Powell is Dazzled With the Speed of his Opponent and was Unable to With- stand the Whirlwind Rushes.

It is Now Conceded that Wolgast is the Next Legitimate Fighter to go up Against Champion Battling Nelson.

(By Associated Press.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Ad Wolgast of Milwaukee was given the decision over Lew Powell at the end of 20 rounds of furious, and at times bloody, fighting, tonight. Wolgast had the better of the contest from start to finish and his whirlwind rushes and aggressiveness in fighting proved a combination that the Californian could not overcome. Powell was a favorite at odds of 8 to 10 and was backed for thousands. It is conceded that Wolgast, after his showing tonight, is a legitimate opponent for Champion Nelson. The bout tonight was remarkable for the terrific clip the fighters maintained and their disinclination at any time to break ground or shrink punishment. Wolgast fairly dazzled Powell with his speed and drove his right and left to Powell's jaw with piston-like regularity.

The following rounds were received at the Tonopah club last evening and were read to a large crowd:

Round 1—Powell opened the battle with a stiff left punch to face and the men sparred furiously at close range. Wolgast peppering his opponent's face with short arm lefts and rights. The men then fought at close range, clinch following clinch, during which Wolgast drove Powell's head with left and right swings delivered at close range. Powell drove a hard short arm right to the head but Wolgast almost drove his opponent through the ropes by landing half a hundred slashes to the face that started the blood flowing from the nose. It was Wolgast's round.

Round 2—Wolgast flung his right five times over the kidneys and as the men locked arms he fought almost evasively at close range. Powell did not seem to be at home with the short punch and Wolgast swung left and right to face and kept up a constant chatter with his seconds. The Milwaukee lad waded in with hard lefts and rights to the face and jaw. Powell was forced back against the ropes with a serious expression on his face. The round ended with Wolgast landing almost at will.

Round 3—Wolgast continued to force a hurricane pace and fairly bowled the Californian man with his rapid fire drives delivered at close range. The men locked heads in the center of the ring. Wolgast landing time and again over the kidneys. Powell sought to protect himself and the referee broke the men from a clinch. Wolgast forced his man around the ring and advanced to the ropes, landing right and left swings at close range. Powell appeared to have great difficulty in solving his weightier opponent's mode of attack.

Round 4—After an exchange of blows Powell drove in two vicious lefts to the jaw that forced the easterner to a clinch. The men continued to battle with arms half locked and head to head. Wolgast then smashed Powell's stomach with a powerful right and then brought his right around the kidneys with great force. As the men broke Powell planted his right on the face, forcing Wolgast against the ropes. The latter then cut loose and closed in with the right solidly on the jaw. Powell's stock went up a trifle in this round.

Round 5—Wolgast came up like a jumping jack but was met with two straight rights and two lefts to the face, then they clinched, and afterward Wolgast swung two hard lefts to the jaw, forcing Powell to the ropes. A mid ring rally followed, each landing left and right short arm punches on the face. Wolgast shot a straight left to face and swung a right over the kidneys. The easterner shot two straight lefts to the face and took in two left punches on the mouth. Wolgast's round.

Round 6—Powell looked very fresh as he ran to the center of the ring. He forced the fighting and had Wolgast slatting about as they closed in. A series of clinches followed. Powell contenting himself with letting Wolgast batter away at his gloves. As the men separated Powell sent in two lefts to the face and some furious close range battling followed, with the crowd constantly shouting for the referee to break the belligerents. The round ended in a clinch with Wolgast forcing matters at close quarters.

Round 7—Wolgast rushed in and lunged out with his left. Powell slipped to the floor, largely, however, from the effects of Wolgast's rush. Fighting head to head, Wolgast swung relentlessly with right and left, frequently catching Powell on the jaw. Blood again spurted from the Californian's mouth as they broke from the clinch. Wolgast fought constantly at close range and kept Powell on the defensive until the round ended.

Round 8—Wolgast hooked his compelled to clinch to defend himself. Wolgast battered his man over the heart with two short arm rights. The round closed with Wolgast constantly the aggressor and having the advantage in a featureless round.

Round 16—Wolgast as he rushed in appeared to be as fresh as at the start, despite his aggressive battling. They clashed in mid ring. Wolgast rocking Powell's head with left and right. Powell appeared groggy at this stage but fought back with all his remaining strength and Wolgast was compelled to defend himself from the Californian's swings, several of which reached their mark with great force. The round ended with the crowd cheering wildly. Wolgast's round.

Round 17—Powell opened with two left punches to the jaw, but Wolgast fought every inch of the way and planted several rights and lefts on the body and head. Wolgast swung a hard left on the jaw and then peppered with right to the same place, forcing Powell to clinch. They exchanged long range lefts to the jaw and then went in close with Wolgast landing right and left on the jaw. As the round ended Powell drew cheers by sending an up-percut right straight to the jaw.

Round 18—Both came up dancing and Powell rapped Wolgast's face with two lefts at close range. Powell shot his left to the jaw and followed to the face with a right. Powell seemed to be reeling, and realizing that his only hope lay in a clinch, he sought desperately to force a clinch. Powell swung a powerful left but Wolgast avoided it. Then Wolgast smashed with right and left to jaw, Powell countering with a left to the face. Powell took his seat with a badly disfigured and bruised face.

Round 19—Wolgast came up as fresh as ever and forced matters in a series of clinches that followed. Powell swung his right to jaw and Wolgast uppercuted with right to jaw, following with two stiff lefts to the mouth and nose. Wolgast fought Powell to a corner, where he landed ceaselessly with short arm left and right swings. The Californian was forced to clinch desperately to his man to escape punishment.

Round 20—The men shook hands and went at it hammer and tongs. Wolgast wrestling his man around the ring. As they broke Powell delivered a straight right to the jaw but Wolgast forced him across the ring by sheer force and backed him up against the ropes, where Powell slipped to his knees. He was up in a moment, clinching. A long clinch followed and as they broke each sent in a right to the jaw. Wolgast got in a left to jaw and Powell fell over against the ropes, but still fighting. The round and fight ended and Referee Jack Welsh immediately awarded the verdict to Wolgast.
